Step into a new beauty career

A LONDON-BASED beauty training centre has developed a range of courses perfect for mums returning to work and those looking for a fast-track change of career to beauty.

Beauty Training Harrow – given the highest rating for teaching by awarding body VTCT – offers flexible hours to suit busy lifestyles, as well as fixed courses in a range of popular salon treatments.

Beauty educator Yvonne Sullivan, who has retrained a range of clients from opticians to City bankers, trained in beauty herself while bringing up a family.

All courses ensure a fast route into a new beauty career with expert advice on running a salon and hands-on practical experience.

"We teach in small groups and one-to-one in some advanced courses. Students also get a chance to practise their skills in our Student Salon where they get to see what it's really like with real clients in a busy salon," she says.

Certificates obtained on Beauty Training Harrow's courses are government-approved National Vocational Qualifications (NVQs) allowing students to work in salons and spas immediately after their course. NVQs are also insurable qualifications.

After completing their courses, many beauty therapists start their own salons and mums returning to work are even finding part-time jobs in beauty salons and spas.

And in a surprise twist, more men have signed up to courses at Beauty Training Harrow as the male grooming industry has grown by 45% in five years. The phenomenon of male therapists started in Japan where research found that men from all walks of life, such as engineering and banking, are changing to jobs that involve making people happy. Yvonne has been training male therapists in threading, waxing and massage and says she is delighted to welcome more male therapists to the beauty industry.
